

Mrs. Frank Hurd, at Whose Home Baker Died

Hurd, a retired manufacturer of East Ylly-first street.

The Hurd family has another child, Browne Hurd, 15 years old, but he has been an invalid from birth.

Casket of Walter Baker's will has been being in the Massachusetts courts and the hearing is set for April 13 next.

Walter F. Baker's body was embalmed before daylight, and when a telephone message was sent to Edward Baker, in Boston, 5 and 6 o'clock in the morning, the brother at once told Mr. Hurd that the body embalmed. It was too late.

Ever since that time Edward Baker has been convinced that his brother was murdered.

Chemical and microscopic examinations of the viscera and the internal organs made with great care by Dr. William Ross, pathologist at the Massachusetts General Hospital. The body was found reeking with arsenic. The poison was in organs which a portion of the embalming fluid could by any possibility have been penetrated.

Walter F. Baker's body was shipped at 10 o'clock to Boston, and was accompanied by Frank Hurd, a partner in the firm of Young, who is Mrs. Hurd's sister, and George W. Hittinghagen, a decorator.

Edward Baker announced to this quartet in their room at the Hotel Marlborough in Boston that he proposed to have an autopsy there was a scene of great excitement. The scene described by Mr. Baker was paid a large sum of money by the Lenoir. The four were occupying two

"The party was introduced, and without further preliminary I said: 'We are going to hold an autopsy. Mrs. Hurd immediately fainted. Brittingham, who wore pink and white clothes, rushed to her, placing his arms around her waist. There, there, dear, never mind,' he said.

Men Sprung Up Angrily.

"Both men sprang up angrily, asking us what we meant by our actions. I answered we meant nothing but a desire to learn the cause of death. Mrs. Hurd recovered then and cried, 'My God, of what do you accuse me?'

Since my brother came into possession of his full income the Hurdas have handled for him practically all his money. There are checks drawn to the order of Mr. Hurd or Mrs. Hurd or 'Cash' for nearly every penny he received. The checks drawn to 'cash' are indorsed by husband and wife. They range from $9 to $500 and appear very like the real thing.

Walter F. Baker's body was buried in Forest Hill Cemetery, in the family plot. The coffin was encased in a massive steel case of unusual thickness, which was hermetically sealed and riveted. When Edgar Baker's investigations had arrived at a point where he was satisfied that off-

The vault in which the body of Baker was buried is one of the most complex pieces of mechanism made for such purposes. It being the idea to prevent any meddling with the remains, the senior, making the application. Any licensed undertaker who makes out a proper application can get permission from the Board of Health to exhume and transport a body. The only additional check on grave-robbing is that the undertaker or other person performing the exhumation must show the person in charge of the cemetery a written authorization from the party owning the lot in which the body is interred.

The application to exhume and transport the Baker body was made in regular form on January 24 by Lewis Jones & Son, undertakers on Lagrange street, Mr. Jones

BAKER PLAYS LEAVE H

It was every reason to know that Walter Baker was making preparations to leave the island home forever, and this was the last time that he was seen much and her death came as a great shock to him. He always liked his brother, Edward, and he had been usually governed by him.

—It was on the occasion of Walter's last visit to the island that he had been told to Edward: "You may never see me back with you. I can no longer remain on the island, and I am going to America." Mr. Baker told Walter.

Walter told Edward that he had already told him that he had made up his mind to live most of the time in America, and that he would visit the island. He was here with him on that visit. He had, in fact, been here some here with him on that visit.

Assisted the Hurds.

"It almost looked to me as though they did not wish to have Walter too far from them.

"We were always led to believe that Frank Hurd, after losing a small fortune in stocks, was allowed $6,000 a year by his father on which to support his wife and family. Evidently this was not enough, for we know that Walter had assisted the Hurds with money from time to time.

"One of the very last things I ever heard of was Walter Baker say, and he said it just before he was leaving for New York the last time he was here, was that he never felt better in his life.

The scene was produced after the senior, making the application. The application is in the form of a written blank card, which is filled out by the person who has deceased, place where buried and cause of death, as certified to by the undertaker making the application.

The Board of Health can make such application. If the blank is properly filled out the transportation permit, as it is called, is granted, except in the case of the Board of Health, when additional precautions are required.

In the Baker case the cause of death was certified to be acute Bright's disease. The Board of Health granted the permit, and the transportation permit was granted.

The Board of Health office was asked what could prevent any person from getting a body out of the city without examining a body who was no flight to.

Hold Undertaker Responsible.

Reply was made that any licensed undertaker could procure a transportation permit from the Board of Health if the blank was properly filled out, the Board of Health holding the undertaker responsible.

It was explained that the check against any possible theft of a body came at the cemetery where the undertaker must be present to take a person in charge not only of the transportation permit from the Board of Health, but also a written permission from the person owning the lot where the body was buried.

was very poor, and very clumsily, suggesting to the most casual glance that the note was written hurriedly or at a time when the writer was either excited or greatly fatigued. Then, you know where the note is, to me significant as indicating that he did not write the will under normal conditions—the fact that no provision is made for the appointment of executors.

"I have found out that my brother once proposed marriage to Mrs. Hurd. She refused, and I had married, named, Frank H. Hurd, who was said at that time to be very wealthy and very handsome."

"Mrs. Hurd highly. I have known her for a long time, but I did not know that she had been married. I have known her since dead, as to leave her one-third of his property. This child never came to know what she was, and I never heard Walter speak of her except when

"It was the failure of my brother to come when I was looking for him that will answer. When Mrs. Hurd came over to Walter's funeral I asked her for a business containing mail. I knew that Walter had a safe deposit vault in Boston. She told me that she had a key. When I located the box at No. 87 Milk street it was empty. I was told that the key was for a wall where I was allowed access to that box.

"I think that Walter must have known Mrs. Hurd for twelve or thirteen years. She was a Miss Burd before her marriage. I met her in 1892 when I was in New Jersey City. She moved in the best society there. She must be about forty now and was very much at home with Walter as an actor.

"She has been a long time since I saw any brother alone. For Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and myself accompanied him here to Boston. I got to know her very well.

"My brother always insisted upon treating her as if she were a sister. She came here with my brother, and with Walter, her husband and Mr. Young."

TOOK MANY HOURS TO UNLOCK VAULT

On the afternoon of January 24, in a snow storm, a wagon from the establishment of J. J. Jones & Co., 225 E. Second street, went to the Forest Hill Cemetery where a gang of workmen had opened the grave of Walter F. Baker and the skull of a crane lifted the heavy stone resting on the grave. The stone was taken in the wagon and brought over to the Lagrange street undertaking rooms.

The racket was taken into the workrooms. The employees were confronted with the problem of opening it.

Afterwards, the remains of Walter Baker and were inclosed in what is known as the Baker steel vault, a contrivance that is declared to be burglar and airproof.

Also for the same committee to recommend the best method of instruction in the schools that will add to the safety and protection of children in case of fire.

Then the Councilman started out to investigate for himself, visiting the 11th school, found conditions that left him dumfounded.

"I found the fire escapes on this school in such a condition that I was not at all sure of their safety," he said. "I found the fire escapes on this school in such a condition that I was not at all sure of their safety."

He found the fire escapes on this school in such a condition that I was not at all sure of their safety.

What Chance on Fire?
"What chance would they have? Suppose the fire escapes were opened promptly. It is reasonable to suppose that the children frightened out of their wits by the noise of the fire, and the fact that they do this so quickly that all the pupils in every floor could be out in less than 30 seconds."

"If the ladder was not opened and they had to stand on these platforms, the flames could shoot over their heads, and they would be roasted to death unless they jumped."

REVEAL DANGER TO MANCHESTER PUPILS

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 6.—At the teachers' meeting of the Manchester (Conn.) school, at which time the municipal appropriation for the year will be decided, Councilman Richard J. Barry of Ward 1 will move that the appropriation for the repair of public buildings be increased as the first step in making the schoolhouses of the city reasonably safe for the children. One of the most serious dangers, he said, is the state of the school buildings in this city. He would recommend that the city should have a committee to look into the condition of the school buildings and to report on the same. Several school buildings were found with the teachers, trusting that the latter might have presented a list of the buildings in the state of the school buildings in this city. MARLBORO SCHOOLS FIRE TRAPS, SAY CITY AUTHORITIES

MARLBORO, March 6.—An investigation of the school buildings in this city, prompted by the catastrophe in Collinwood, Conn., in which 110 school children were killed, has revealed the fact that two of the city's schools in the Pleasant street and Centre districts were in a very poor condition.

The Pleasant street school, which accommodates 600 pupils, is an old wooden three-story affair, and the floors and woodwork are in a state of decay. The school is practically unusable on account of its location, it being in an out-of-the-way place. In the Centre school conditions are practically the same. In both of these schools the pupils are crowded in the hallways, and the exits are not clearly marked. The investigation also brought to light the fact that the exits in the schools are not clearly marked, and the exits are not clearly marked.

Farm wagon used to carry bodies of school children victims of Collinwood fire to the morgue.

sway every body is touched—nothing of the school children of that large number. The investigation, which is already in progress, shows conclusively that one of the two doors at the west end was locked. There were but two exits. The criminal negligence of having that door locked is now known that the great perilousness of the school was not at all three feet.

ATTEMPT TO FIX RESPONSIBILITY FOR CLEVELAND HORROR
CLEVELAND, O., March 6.—The fact that 161 bodies have been taken from the ruins of Collinwood school, one hundred and thirty-one of those boys and girls are identified, thirty others are as badly injured and mutilated by the fire that they will be recognized from the bodies in the hallways. The bodies in the hallways are as badly injured and mutilated by the fire that they will be recognized from the bodies in the hallways.

but one door to serve as an exit for hundreds of pupils, and in the majority of the worst doors, which must serve as the only exit if the front entrance was cut off by the flames, opened inward, in violation of the fire law, which requires all exits of public buildings to open outward and in several instances these exits were rendered practically unavailable in case of fire.

At the Spring School in the Springfield North End district, there is but one exit door, which is a narrow hallway, and the front door was found blocked with a pile of books.

At the Park School in West Manchester there is no fire alarm, and the fire drill can only be maintained by shouting a warning. The fire drill can only be maintained by shouting a warning. The fire drill can only be maintained by shouting a warning.

More supposes will be issued in different quarters because it is now known that the stairway construction of the building made it little more than an open fire for the spreading flames.

Save for the futile heroism of the teachers and rescuers, there is little—hardly any—to attribute the horror of the disaster. But, "Gues's who is man" cried a laughing little voice in the ears of grief-stricken Henry Marks today as two little hands held that the "ears of death" looked at him.

The father, turning quickly, saw his eight-year-old daughter, Helen, standing behind him. He had seen searching for her body in the ruins ever since the fire and had seen up all hope when he had played from school, running off to the "girl friend."

Henry Marks is on the verge of going mad from joy as great as the grief of Leonard Remondino, of New York, who saved his three children today with rapid and bold in the fire where with him today the pictures of his two little girls who perished in the flames. Remondino's hand is completely gone.

WITNESS TELLS TRAGIC ENDING OF OLD CHUMS

Accidental Shooting Is Followed by Suicide at North Easton.

Special to the Boston American.

NORTH EASTON, March 6.—The heart-rending story of how John Bengtson, a young Swedish workman, accidentally shot by his son, Alfred, and then, in a fit of despair, took his own life and fell dead beside his father, is told today by Alfred Johnson, brother of the deceased, at a public hearing held here yesterday afternoon.

Alfred had the revolver, he must have thought it was intended, for he never would have taken Bengtson's life on purpose. Why, they were close in the old country and, when they came here, they were still as friendly as ever.

Alfred pointed the revolver in the air, and the bullet struck Bengtson in the chest. At the fourth fall on the ground, there was a shot. Bengtson fell, crying:

"I'm shot. I'm dying."

There he stood, Alfred gazed in horror at his father, just over a moment, then, without a word, he turned and ran.

Preparations are being made today for the burial. It is possible that a double funeral will take place, and that the two friends, who were so close, will be interred at the same time.

Each of them, who had been in this country a year, were twenty-two years of age, and were both single.

Alfred Johnson, who was the son of the deceased, was a young man of about 20 years of age, and was a native of Sweden.

CURSES FLEE FIRE IN LIGHT CLOTHES

PANIC AVERTED BY FIRE DRILL AT EMERSON PRIVATE HOSPITAL.

Nurses and women employees of the Emerson private hospital, Forest Hills, escaped in their night clothes at 5 o'clock today from the nurses' home on Orchard avenue, while flames were raging in the basement and first floor.

According to Miss Grace Dunn, superintendent of nurses, there was no alarm because they had been trained in fire drills. A hundred feet away, patients in the crowded hospital were unaware that a fire was in progress, so quietly was the work of the department accomplished. Manager of the hospital, Mr. J. R. W. Roebbeck, said:

The fire was discovered a few minutes after 5 o'clock by Miss Mabel Davis, a nurse, who was on duty. She found smoke coming from the basement. She called out "Fire!" and the staff followed her to the basement. The fire was extinguished by the staff.
